NATIONAL NEWS & UPDATES

Support strengthened for children with SEND

On 19th January 2024 the Department for Education announced that families across England who have children with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND) will soon receive further support with more short breaks, supported internship opportunities and better support for those with Down syndrome. The short breaks innovation programme – which provides a range of unforgettable activities for children with SEND, to help improve their health, education and wellbeing outcomes – will be extended to a further seven local authorities.

Children and young people are being supported to reach their full potential with a pilot introduced to test widening eligibility of the supported internships programme. The work-based study programme for young people aged 16 to 24 is currently for those who have Education, Health and Care Plans (EHCP), and aims to provide support during the transition from education into paid employment. Twelve local authorities are taking part in the pilot of the programme, supporting those who do not have an EHCP but require extra support to gain employment.

From January 2025 the DfE will be collecting new data about the numbers of children with Down syndrome and where they are educated through changes to the School Census. This helps meet their commitment to improving the life outcomes and opportunities for people with Down syndrome, to identify good practice and shape long term services. This follows on from the Down Syndrome Act 2022 aiming to raise the understanding and awareness of the specific needs of people with Down syndrome.

LOCAL NEWS & UPDATES

Worcestershire SENCo Network

As previously shared, we have made the majority of SENCo Network events FREE to remove any financial barriers preventing attendance. There is no longer the requirement for your school or Trust to purchase an SLA.

As always, we try to make these events as accessible to all as possible. The SENCo Network Locality meetings in November were very well received and initial feedback about the new format was overwhelmingly positive. SENCos particularly valued the opportunity to talk, collaborate and problem solve with other SENCos and professionals from specialist support services.

We look forward to welcoming even more SENCos to the SENCo Network Locality meetings in the Spring Term!

To ensure we are able to maintain an oversight of attendance at both the online and face-to-face locality events, we do require you to book your place via the WCF CPD Portal using the link below. You can search each event by the name or course code – please try to attend the Locality Meeting where your school is based where possible.

The virtual briefing sessions will be recorded and made available to SENCos who have booked a place but are not able to attend the live session.

The proposed date for the Summer Term “Inclusion Conference” is Tuesday 18th June 2024 so please pop this date in your diary! This will be the only event that will have a cost attached - further details will be shared during the Spring Term.

Dyscalculia Awareness Day - 3rd March 2024

For information and free resources on Dyscalculia Awareness Day please visit: <https://www.dyscalculianetwork.com/dyscalculia-awareness-day-2024/>

Dyscalculia is defined by the British Dyslexia Association as a specific and persistent difficulty in understanding numbers which can lead to a diverse range of difficulties with maths. Estimates suggest 1 in 20 people in the UK have Dyscalculia, it is as likely to affect females as males. Compared to an estimated 1 in 10 with Dyslexia, with a higher prevalence amongst males.

Common traits can include recognising numbers, estimation, learning number sequences, reading analogue clocks, arithmetic, planning journeys and understanding the value of numbers. Dyslexic learners have problems learning number facts and procedure.

Dyscalculia is lifelong and the impact can be great

Difficulties may include handling money and keeping track of finances. Everyday activities such as driving can be affected, driving too fast or too slowly. Journeys and timekeeping are common difficulties, including following timetables. Phone numbers may be hard to recall. Purchasing a morning cup of coffee may cause immense stress due to difficulties with money transactions and recalling pin numbers, mental arithmetic may be extremely difficult, relying on finger counting and formal calculations.

Other areas of difficulty

Other areas of difficulty can include memorising basic number facts and slow to perform calculations. Addition is often the default operation used. Multiplication and fractions can cause immense difficulties. A poor sense of numbers, that is the oneness of one and estimation accompanies Dyscalculia. Dyscalculia learners lack an intuitive grasp of numbers. A poor understanding of place value makes it difficult to progress with formal teaching methods. The concepts behind word problems may be difficult to grasp. Keeping scores in games and any other application of number, time and sense of direction can be impacted. High levels of anxiety and frustration surrounding maths is common.

Unique Profile

It may not be all areas of maths that are impacted, some individuals may even be good at geometry and algebra. Like all difficulties every person has their own unique profile.

Famous People

There are many famous people reported to have Dyscalculia, these include Robbie Williams, Mick Hucknall, Benjamin Franklin, Cher and Thomas Edison. Strengths associated with having Dyscalculia include intuitive and strong strategic thinking, very creative and a love of words. Individuals with Dyscalculia are more likely than the general population to have co-occurrence with ADHD, Dyslexia and Dyspraxia.

Support

It's important to recognise the difficulties and support children's learning through concrete apparatus, with the need to build conceptual models before internalising. Anxiety surrounding maths can exacerbate the difficulties, with the stress response leading to a shut down, unable to assimilate new learning. Teachers can develop ways to improve retention and learning of number facts through a range of multisensory activities, moving away from worksheets, playing games and demystifying the language of maths by using mathematical language widely. Visualisation, including drawing the problem, song and rhythm are often used.

For adults with Dyscalculia a calculator, handheld or the calculator function on a phone can be hugely beneficial, as well as memory prompts for pin numbers and other areas of difficulty.

For further help and support see the British Dyslexia Association (bdadyslexia.org.uk) and Steve Chinn (stevechinn.co.uk), author of award-winning books on Dyscalculia, including myths, checklists and information on assessment.

11 dedicated sessions can be found at the NEC on 15th and 16th March 2024, where the Dyscalculia Show will co-located with this year's Dyslexia Show, the UK's leading exhibition dedicated to dyslexia and neurodiversity.

<https://dyscalculia.show/>

Dyscalculia is lifelong and it is necessary to support through adaptations. Being aware and understanding the difficulties is key.

Exploring the Experiences of Culturally Deaf Parents and Hearing School Staff

Ruby Noble is a Trainee Educational Psychologist currently on placement with Worcestershire Children First and a postgraduate researcher at the University of Birmingham. Their doctoral research is exploring the experiences of culturally Deaf parents and hearing school staff of collaborating with one another. Ruby is aiming to conduct online interviews with school staff to explore their experiences of interacting and collaborating with culturally Deaf parents (i.e. parents who are Deaf and whose preferred method of communication is British Sign Language) of children in their schools. This would take place on Microsoft Teams and would last for around one hour. The date and time would be agreed at a later point depending on the availability of those involved. The interview would be recorded using the Teams function so that I can transcribe it, but the video would be deleted once transcription is complete. The transcription would be anonymised.

Ruby is looking to recruit hearing school staff (either teaching staff or pastoral staff) who are currently working with Deaf parents in a school setting or have worked with Deaf parents in a school setting in the last five years.

An information sheet for school staff is available for download. We would very much appreciate it if you could pass these on to colleagues in your school. If people are interested in exploring participating in this study, please advise them to contact Ruby via email at rxn110@student.bham.ac.uk. Many thanks in advance.

TRAINING AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES

NASEN SEND CPD Units

NASEN have launched four more online SEND CPD units in partnership with Real Group Training.

Funded by the Department for Education as part of the Universal SEND Services programme, the new units explore the following themes:

- Understanding executive function
- Memory for learning
- Developing Maths skills
- Person centred working

They enhance the existing portfolio of 13 units which addresses aspects of Safety and Belonging, Language and Communication, SEMH, Sensory Processing and Physical Needs. The earlier releases have since been accessed by almost 12,000 professionals, with consistently positive feedback.

Life for everyone in schools and colleges is busier than ever, so NASEN have made these units as easy to access as possible by working with a range of leading specialists from the sector, condensing many years of experience and understanding into these bite-sized modules.

- Each unit takes just 20 minutes to complete
- Units give clear guidance on adaptations to teaching to help meet the needs of all learners
- There's no need to complete units in order - you can pick a choose to suit your needs
- Partially completed units can be saved, so there's no fear of 'losing' work

For anyone wanting to contextualise their learning further, NASEN offer live online discussions in the shape of our Specialist Spotlights. These often involve the specialists involved in the development of the units and are a great space in which to build on learning, to share experiences and seek advice.

Supporting Children's Emotional Health and Wellbeing in the Classroom

This course is aimed at teachers and teaching assistants, in helping to support children who are experiencing difficulties accessing the school day. There is an increase in children who are struggling with their emotional wellbeing, which is impacting them and all those around them.

During the 90 minutes, we will be looking at everyday practical strategies, that can be easily implemented and used, to help not only those children who dysregulate, but all children in the classroom. The strategies will help adults to support those children who require a different approach, in order to make their school day more successful and a positive experience. It is important that children are emotionally regulated and understand their emotions, which in turn will not only positively impact their educational experience but will also help support a productive classroom environment.

NASEN - SEND Teacher Handbook

On 22nd January 2024, nasen published an updated version of the SEND Teacher Handbook which is available for free download.

This handbook has been developed as a resource for teachers to use over time as they embed inclusive practice in their classrooms: it is not intended that it is read cover-to-cover. It has been written for both primary, secondary and specialist colleagues: teaching assistants, teachers, senior leaders and headteachers. The handbook includes whole-school and whole-class approaches as well as subject-specific and condition-specific guidance.

It brings together practical examples of high-quality teaching - placing focus on removing barriers to learning, getting to know and understand individual learners, and bringing to life the graduated approach.

With three completely new subject-specific chapters for History, Geography and Religious Education, it offers a wealth of ideas and information about the following key areas:

- Planning inclusive lessons
- Creating including environments
- Curriculum considerations for KS3 and 4
- Strategies to scaffold learning
- Vocabulary retentions
- Supporting learners who need additional conceptual understanding

New Toolkit for Targeted Mental Health Support in Schools and Colleges

Anna Freud Mentally Healthy Schools has produced a new interactive library of targeted support options that schools and colleges might offer. It is designed to help you to identify forms of evidence-based targeted support to meet the needs of your students that other schools and/or colleges have demonstrated can be effective. The tool outlines forms of targeted support and associated evidence using the most recent evidence reviews published by NICE. Targeted support: Mentally Healthy Schools guide and toolkit can be used as part of your whole school approach to mental health.

The toolkit provides:

- A guide to help schools and colleges develop effective targeted mental wellbeing support. This includes topics such as:
 - Understanding your setting
 - Identifying appropriate targeted support
 - Introducing targeted mental wellbeing support
 - Evaluating, sustaining and adapting targeted support
- A targeted support tool:
 - Includes filterable evidence-based tools by relevant categories (e.g., educational phase, age, outcomes, delivery method).

The toolkit is well worth exploring to support the work you are delivering in school.

SHINE A LIGHT - SHARING EFFECTIVE PRACTICE

Emotional Literacy Support Assistant (ELSA)

The Educational Psychology Service have trained over 30 ELSAs who support the emotional development of children and young people in schools. The ELSA programme has been widely adopted as an evidence-based intervention in over 100 local authorities in the UK and can help to lower exclusion rates, promote emotional wellbeing and improve academic outcomes.

ELSAs are trained across six full days and receive half-termly supervision from an Educational Psychologist. They are trained to plan and deliver individualised programmes of support, including awareness of own and other people's emotions; management of stress, grief, anger and conflict; development of social interaction skills; and promotion of a realistic self-concept and self-esteem.

Recent evaluations and case studies have shown a positive impact for children and young people in schools, including a child coming into school daily and confidently after showing reluctance to attend and having needed a high level of transitional support; also, two children who reported difficult interactions with one another building a strong friendship after intervention around communication styles, friendship skills and building resilience.

Based on evaluations and positive impact we will be running this course again in September 2024 – details of which can be found on the CPD portal.
