Tithe Apportionment and Plans handlist

The Tithe Commutation Act of 1836 replaced the ancient system of payment of tithes in kind with monetary payments. As part of the valuation process which was undertaken by the Tithe Commissioners a series of surveys were carried out, part of the results of which are the Tithe Maps and Apportionments.

An Apportionment is the principal record of the commutation of tithes in a parish or area. Strictly speaking the apportionment and map together constitute a single document, but have been separated to facilitate use and storage. The standard form of an Apportionment contains columns for the name(s) of the landowners and occupier(s); the numbers, acreage, name or description, and state of cultivation of each tithe area; the amount of rent charge payable, and the name(s) of the tithe-owner(s).

Tithe maps vary greatly in scale, accuracy and size. The initial intent was to produce maps of the highest possible quality, but the expense (incurred by the landowners) led to the provision that the accuracy of the maps would be testified to by the seal of the commissioners, and only maps of suitable quality would be so sealed. In the end, about one sixth of the maps had seals. A map was produced for each "tithe district", that is, one region in which tithes were paid as a unit. These were often distinct from parishes or townships. Areas in which tithes had already been commuted were not mapped, so that coverage varied widely from county to county. The maps indicated parcels and buildings, assigning each a number.

The Tithe Acts provided for the making of an original and two copies of every confirmed instrument of apportionment; all were sealed and signed by the Tithe Commissioners. The originals are held by The National Archives. The copies were deposited (a) with the Registrar of the diocese and (b) with the incumbents and churchwardens of the parish. Our index indicates which of these copies, if any, we hold.

Prior to the Tithe Act 1936, various Acts made provision for the liability to pay tithe rent charge to be extinguished by redemption of the charge. The T. R. C. (Tithe Redemption Commission) column in our index refers to the existence of any paperwork associated with these provisions.

Our index indicates any original tithe plans or apportionments available at Worcestershire Record Office, along with any copies of either and any associated documents. Enclosure awards available for the same area are also indicated. Many of our tithe and enclosure maps are available on CD, which should be used in the first instance for preservation reasons.

Please see the key at the bottom of each page for an explanation of abbreviations used in the table.
