

Programming

What is Programming?

Programming = The process of writing computer software

Program = Sequences of instructions for a computer.

To tell a computer to do something, a program must be written to tell it exactly what to do and how to do it.

Programs are made up of statements that the programming language knows and understands.

Each statement tells the computer to perform a specific task, and the instructions tell a computer what to do.